i was on tumblr when yahoo had to sell it for $3 million after buying it for $1.1 billion. we were all a little bit responsible for losing yahoo a billion dollars. and with that type of collective effort, i believe we here on twitter can lose elon musk even more

If Musk successfully buys Twitter deleting your Twitter is one form of protest but Twitter has barely ever been profitable anyway so another potentially approach is working together to up the average cost per user and reduce income per user

I'd suggest a browser plugin that auto-blocks all posters of promoted tweets, which makes promoting tweets terrible for business.

Wasn't the fall of Tumblr partly caused by their new stance against NSFW stuff among other things?

Which forced many to change platform. In turn reducing the traffic on their site?

It's actually easy to do: mute or block every time you see sponsored content in your feed. Once paying twitter makes you lose reach, it'll become irrational to do so, and twitter will lose even more money than they do now.
