👤 My watch ends today with Twitter 1.0.

It was an honor working with a great set of people over the last 6 years.

And just like that, after 12 years, I have left Twitter. I have nothing but love for all my fellow tweeps, past and present. A thousand faces and a thousand scenes are flashing through my mind right now - I love you Twitter and I'll forever bleed blue 🙏💙

The best thing at Twitter were the people; the love, the camaraderie, the commitment to purpose. 🤔

Thank you, team 🙏

🙏 Grateful

Obligatory gun and badge drop. Didn't get to finish my collage but glad to have been here for as long as I have. I'm forever going to look for Twitter 1.0 in my future employers.

I am going to miss this place. We built something special here, and I do not expect to see its like ever again. I have worked here at Twitter for over 11 years. Back in July, I was the 27th most tenured employee at the company. Now I'm the 15th. I am not going to click "yes"

I am going to miss this place. We built something special here, and I do not expect to see its like ever again. I have worked here at Twitter for over 11 years. Back in July, I was the 27th most tenured employee at the company. Now I'm the 15th. I am not going to click the "yes" button in the email and I intend to accept the offer for severance.

Twitter has been such a special place over the past decade, a rare anomaly shining bright, alone in the vast space of corporate cultures. So many kind, passionate, multifaceted and interesting people have come and gone over the years. It has been an absolute pleasure and an honor to have worked with and learned from you all, past and present. Despite the continual ebb and flow, one constant has remained steadfast throughout: a culture seated firmly on a foundation of kindness, empathy, and respect. We have worked so hard at building and maintaining a culture that values kindness for each other, and a fierce, protective loyalty to the wellbeing and safety of our users, and I am filled with pride when I think back on how surprisingly successful we have been at maintaining that culture for so long. We refused to hire jerks, we explicitly graded management candidates on their empathy and how they would care for and support their teams, we rewarded good mentorship, and we demanded accountability from our leadership when they lost their way. This culture made Twitter a wonderful place to work, but it also enabled us to build some of the most reliable and cutting edge technology in the world. I will always be proud of that.

Seeing the solidarity and unwavering support that we have for each other here has warmed my heart, and validates my faith in this large community of exceptional people. You are good people. I will miss you. It's been an honor. 🙏

I joined Twitter last year as a contractor, converted to a full time employee and today said goodbye to the team I swore I'd be apart of for much longer than this. It has been a privilege to be apart of this team, and I will miss it immensely.
