I just have to comment. Candace Cameron Bure left the Hallmark channel because they started to feature gay people, and she started her own network for the sole purpose of excluding gay people. There really is no hate like Christian love.

Being in agreement with scripture isn't judging. Also, He said to love one another. What he didn't say was that we have to be accepting of everything a person does. He didn't say to the woman "Your sins are forgiven...now go & keep doing what you've been doing!"

Love isn't a squishy emotion. It's not mere affection. Love is what you DO. Love wills and works for the good of the other, and will accept nothing less. Love does not permit the loved one to destroy himself if it can be helped. You have a flawed understanding of love.

The fact that you are proudly asserting your refusal to simply accept someone is so weird to me. And the equation many make between aspects of yourself that you ultimately have choice in, vs non-changeable in-born characteristics is so skewed it's hard to even take it seriously.

So your saying you hate Christians because they disagree with your lifestyle, but Christians can't disagree and still show love? Interesting. Maybe you should learn scripture before regurgitating hate. God loves everyone and calls for us to as well.

Had this convo with someone earlier.

I was told my church, religion and myself was “homophobic” and terrible because I don’t agree with the gay lifestyle.

Eh. Whatever.

Keep working and that “love and tolerance” champ. Hell come to church, we can help ya there

Christianity is very clear that homosexuality is wrong.

She's allowed to live her truth. You want her to subvert her own beliefs because it's “nicer.”

In which case you don't really believe in respecting religious diversity or devotion.

Well also Christian's seem to forget that it's not their job to judge anyone. That's gods job. Also as Christian's you're supposed to love thy neighbor no matter who they are. And again not judge them for who they are.

Well that statement also makes you a bigot so how are you any better? Clearly you "hate" Christians for being true to their faith. If some other religion stood by their beliefs like that you would say they were being "brave" to stand for what they believe in. Check yourself.

Because they don't have to announce their hatred as a reason for creating. When one leaves something due to hatred and then builds something on that hate, it should be questioned. Christians who decide who is worthy of God's love & puts conditions on it are going to be shocked.

The actress also addresses those people who criticized her directly.

"To the members of the media responsible for using this opportunity to fan flames of conflict and hate, I have a simple message: I love you anyway. To those who hate what I value and who are attacking me online: I love you. To those who have tried to assassinate my character: I love you," she says.
