NEW: On Nov. 1, Twitter's trust and safety team prepared a 7-page document warning Musk and his team about exactly how the rollout of the new "verified" badge would go wrong.

They were ignored.

And then their fears came true

With @ZoeSchiffer

platformer.news/p/elon-only-tr...

Show this thread

Days before the Nov. 9 launch, the company's trust and safety team had prepared a seven-page list of recommendations intended to help Musk avoid the most obvious and damaging consequences of his plans for Blue. The document, which was obtained by Platformer, predicts with eerie accuracy some of the events that follow.

"Motivated scammers/bad actors could be willing to pay ... to leverage increased amplification to achieve their ends where their upside exceeds the cost," reads the document's first recommendation, which the team labeled "P0" to denote a concern in the highest risk category.

"Impersonation of world leaders, advertisers, brand partners, election officials, and other high profile individuals" represented another P0 risk, the team found. "Legacy verification provides a critical signal in enforcing impersonation rules, the loss of which ALT is likely to lead to an increase in impersonation of high-profile accounts on Twitter."

CEO calls out employee. Employee corrects him. CEO fires employee for knowing what he's talking about. Truly a god-tier leader.

Elon Musk @elonmusk
@EricFrohnhoefer Twitter is super slow on Android. What have you done to fix that?

Eric Frohnhoefer @ @EricFrohnhoefer
@elonmusk We have done a bunch of work to improve performance and we found that it correlates well with increasing UAM and Ad spend. Agree, there is plenty of room for performance improvements on Android. However, I don't think the number of requests is the primary issue.

Eric Frohnhoefer @ @EricFrohnhoefer
@elonmusk For a cold start of the app there are ~20 requests to load home timeline. Most of the requests are non-blocking and happen in the background. This includes things like images, user settings, hashflags, etc.

Eric Frohnhoefer @ @EricFrohnhoefer
@elonmusk I think there are three reasons the app is slow. First it's bloated with features that get little usage. Second, we have accumulated years of tech debt as we have traded velocity and features over perf. Third, we spend a lot of time waiting for network responses.

Eric Frohnhoefer @ @EricFrohnhoefer
@elonmusk One performance focused holdback (go/ddg/7601) showed a causal increase of 40M UAM. For reference Mixed Media only showed +10M UAM. If we want to improve things we need to make tradeoffs that favor performance over new feature work.

Eric Frohnhoefer @ @EricFrohnhoefer
@elonmusk Frankly we should probably prioritize some big rewrites to combat 10+ years of tech debt and make a call on deleting features aggressively.
